David Dahl set familiar verses from Psalm 42 to hauntingly beautiful music that amplifies the longing for God evoked by the psalmist's words. The organ and choir often act antiphonally throughout.

Following the critical success of the Portland Psalter book, one composer, Robert Hawthorne, has written additional settings of the alternate psalms and canticles appointed for the revised common lectionary and for other liturgical occasions in the Book of Common Prayer. The lectionary included is the full psalmody appointed for the Easter Vigil, All Saints, the Annunciation, the Visitation, Baptism, Burial of the Dead, Ordinations, and the celebration of a new ministry. With this volume, the church is provided with a complete musical psalm resource and more of the fresh and singable settings for which Hawthorne is noted.

Early Christian theology posited a strict division between animals and humans. Nevertheless, animal figures abound in early Christian literature and art. From Augustine's renowned wonder at the agility of the mosquito on the wing to vivid exegeses of the six days of creation detailed in Genesis and when they appear, the distinctions between human and animal are often dissolved. How, asks Patricia Cox Miller, does one account for the stunning zoological imagination found in a wide variety of genres of ancient Christian texts? In the eye of the animal, complicates the role of animals in early Christian thought by showing how textual and artistic images and interpretive procedures actually celebrated a continuum of human and animal life. Synthesizing early Christian studies, contemporary philosophy, animal studies, ethology, and modern poetry, Miller identifies two contradictory strands in early Christian thinking about animals: the dominant thread viewed the body and soul of the human being as dominical or the crowning achievement of creation animals with their defective souls related to humans only as reminders of the brutish physical form however the second strand relied upon the idea of a continuum of animal life which enabled comparisons between animals and humans this second tendency explains miller arises particularly in early christian literature in which ascetic identity the body and ethics intersect she explores the tension between these modes by tracing the image of the animal in early christian literature from the ethical animal behavior on display in basil of caesarea s hexaameron and the anonymous physiologus to the role of animals in articulating erotic desire and from the idyllic intimacy of monks and animals in literature of desert ascetism to early christian art that envisions paradise through human animal symbiosis
