extraterritoriality is often understood as an exceptional sometimes even illegitimate form of state lawmaking yet it is pervasive in contemporary practice countries around the world rely on extraterritorial regulation to protect local markets in areas including competition law and data privacy it is also recognized as a useful strategy to promote international human rights and to address shared challenges as diverse as transnational crime tax base erosion and climate change the normalization of extraterritoriality as a legal technique however has by no means resolved longstanding debates about its place in the international legal order containing in depth studies of fifteen legal systems this volume provides a critical comparative perspective on those debates a significant volume of literature already exists concerning the inclusion of aviation in the eu ets most of the research laid its focus on specific industry levels such as the individual airline the aviation industry in general or macroeconomic aspects in this context these studies tried to anticipate market reactions triggered by the eu ets by analyzing specific issues such as the financial impact on airlines changes in competitive behavior or implications for the overall industry development as a consequence the existing studies took only a limited market view and made assumptions about expected developments in specific fields of the aviation industry however at the time of writing this thesis conclusions about the scope of impact could hardly be drawn from existing impact assessments because of the wide range of issues that exceeded the scope of most impact studies hence a broader research approach is needed which takes different analytical perspectives to describe the scope of impact of the eu ets and depict potential effects for the aviation industry
