what does it take to construct humanity s cultural history and what do these efforts produce in the world in the politics of world heritage elif kalaycioglu analyzes unesco s flagship regime which seeks to curate a cultural history of humanity attached to outstanding universal value and tethered to goals of peace and solidarity kalaycioglu s analysis tracks that construction across fifty years of the regime and maps it onto three distinct visions humanity as a rarified transhistorical subject humanity as a diverse subject and humanity as a subject that is adequately represented by the community of nation states in each of these constructions experts and states take up the cultural and historical resources that circulate within the regime to narrate a humanity into being and position themselves as its adjudicators contributors and custodians each construction comes with remainders that is parts of humanity excluded from this cultural history and internal hierarchies between those at its center and others that remain on the margins these hierarchies challenge the aspiration to peace and solidarity while these aspirations have changed across the three iterations of humanity across the different forms the regime s structures and participants have been ill equipped and hesitant to engage with the underbellies of humanity towards robust visions of peace and solidarity in contrast to this general tendency kalaycioglu excavates from select nomination files nested constructions of humanity that hold onto the globality and unevenness of its political conditions and presents the possibility of robust visions of peace and solidarity and humanity s different futures not all world heritage sites have people living within or close by their boundaries but many do the designation of world heritage status brings a new dimension to the functioning of local communities and particularly through tourism too many tourists accentuated by the world heritage label or in some cases not enough tourists despite anticipation of increased numbers can act to disrupt and disturb relations within a community and between communities either way tourism can be seen as a form of activity that can generate interest and concern as it is played out within world heritage sites but the relationships that world heritage sites and their consequent tourism share with communities are not just a function of the number of tourists the relationships are complex and ever changing as the communities themselves change and are built upon long standing and wider contextual factors that stretch beyond tourism this volume drawing upon a wide range of international cases relating to some 33 world heritage sites reveals the multiple dimensions of the relations that exist between the sites and local communities the designation of the sites can create obscure and heighten the power relations between different parts of a community between different communities and between the tourism and the heritage sector increasingly the management of world heritage is not only about the management of buildings and landscapes but about managing the communities that live and work in or near them this volume addresses the relationship between the unesco world heritage site of angkor cambodia and the nearby town of siem reap while previous work on heritage sites has mainly focused on protected areas this book shifts the attention to the margins where detrimental tourism driven urban development may take place by delimiting a protected site a non heritage space is created in which spatial fragmentation disruptive development processes and unjust power plays can occur in post war cambodia liberalization and collective aspirations for progress have provided a strong incentive for modernization controversial interests compete in the arena of urban development and real estate development prevails over planned growth at the same time siem reap s marginal position allows for some freedom in architectural and urban design in the shadow of institutional control this architectural space expresses alternative visions of the khmer heritage and connects them with images of urban modernity this collection of papers discuss world trade law and focus on the contested nature of world heritage at sites as diverse as the netherlands ellis island usa post colonial mesoamerica cambodia fiji kyrgyzstan and vietnam in addition eight research notes explore heritage interpretation in the usa lebanon peru indonesia singapore tasmania and india in 2015 the general assembly of state parties to the world heritage convention passed a ground breaking sustainable development policy that seeks to bring the world heritage system into line with the un s sustainable development agenda unesco 2015 world heritage and sustainable development provides a broad overview of the process that brought about the new policy and the implications of its enactment the book is divided into four parts part i puts the policy in its historical and theoretical context and part ii offers an analysis of the four policy dimensions on which the policy is based environmental sustainability inclusive social development inclusive economic development and the fostering of peace and security part iii presents perspectives from iucn icomos and icrom the three advisory bodies to the world heritage committee and part iv offers case study perspectives on the practical implications of the policy contributions come from a wide range of experienced heritage professionals and practitioners who offer both inside perspectives on the evolution of the policy and outside perspectives on its implications combined they present and analyse the main ideas debates and implications of the policy change this book is key reading for all heritage professionals interested in developing a better understanding of the new sustainable development policy it is also essential reading for scholars and students working in the area

this volume analyzes the politics policy and practice of cultural heritage at the global level identifying the major directions in which international heritage practice is moving and exploring the key issues likely to shape the cultural heritage field well into the twenty first century it examines the tensions between the universal claims of much heritage practice particularly that associated with the world heritage system and national and local perspectives it explores the international legal framework developed since world war two to protect heritage particularly at times of war and from theft showing how contemporary global problems of conflict and illicit trade continue to challenge the international legal system heritage and globalisation critiques the incorporation of heritage in the world economy through the policies of international development organisations and the global tourism trade it also approaches heritage from seldom considered perspectives as a form of aid as a development paradigm and as a form of sustainable practice the book identifies some of the most pressing issues likely to face the heritage industry at a global level in coming decades including the threat posed by climate change and the need for poverty reduction providing a historically and theoretically rigorous approach to heritage as a form of and manifestation of globalisation the volume s emphasis is on contemporary issues and new fields for heritage practice all 1 031 natural and cultural heritage sites in one volume detailed information and descriptions of each unesco world heritage site superb color photography for a landscape a monument or an urban ensemble to be inscribed in the unesco list of world heritage sites they need to be one thing above all a part of the legacy of all mankind the heritage of the world s population that needs to be protected to date more than 1 000 sites monuments and natural spaces have been inscribed as the heritage of humanity according to the rules of unesco and benefit from a specially protected status the compact volume presents all the world heritage sites with superb photographs informative texts provide background information and maps help to locate each site the remarkable success of the 1972 unesco convention concerning the protection of world cultural and natural heritage is borne out by the fact that nearly 1 000 properties have now been designated as possessing outstanding universal value and recognition given to the imperative for their protection however the remarkable success of the convention is not without its challenges and a key issue for many sites relates to the touristic legacies of inscription for many sites inscription on the world heritage list acts as a promotional device and the management challenge is one of protection conservation and dealing with increased numbers of tourists for other sites designation has not brought anticipated expansion in tourist numbers and associated investments what is clear is that tourism is now a central concern to the wide array of stakeholders involved with world heritage sites the unesco world heritage convention has become one of the most successful un instruments for promoting cultural diplomacy and dialogue on conservation of cultural and natural heritage this book provides an overview of the convention through an interdisciplinary approach to conservation it shows that based on the notion of outstanding universal value and international cooperation for the protection of heritage the convention provides a platform for sustainable development through the conservation and management of heritage of significance to humanity with increasing globalization of heritage world heritage conservation is reviewed as an emerging interdisciplinary field of study creating new opportunities for inclusive heritage debate both locally and globally requiring common tools and understanding with over a thousand properties inscribed on the world heritage list from biologically diverse sites such as the central amazon conservation complex to the urban landscape of the metropolis of rio de janeiro the book will help students researchers and professionals in the identification protection conservation and presentation of world heritage targeted at a diversity of disciplines the book critically describes the strategies for implementing the convention and the processes of heritage governance for sustainable development this book explores the politics of heritage beyond its use in the construction of identity or the politics of representation labeling something heritage is an intensely political act that legitimises certain processes over others as a policy document the world heritage convention gives institutional authority to discourses of heritage and internationalism at the core of the world heritage system is a tension between the need to protect the world's heritage and the sovereignty of state parties while there have been many recent changes to the world heritage system provoked by the imbalances of the world heritage list the eurocentricities its definitions and a growing concern for its wider credibility what cannot change is the sovereignty of state parties through labelling something world heritage certain actions of the state are legitimised and empowered by claims to its outstanding universal value which must be preserved for humanity thus the world heritage system can be viewed as an anti politics machine ferguson1990 which reifies the role of state bureaucracy in africa through de politicised claims to universal value
