jacqueline bishop's ceramic tea service the keeper of all the secrets is a new commission that will go on display in the queen's house at royal museums greenwich in early 2025 featuring the image of the market woman and various plants known to induce abortion the service is a comment on colonialism empire and the position of women in society the figure of the market woman is a well known symbol of the plantation system but little has been written on her significance she performed an illicit resistance to the plantation system secretly assisting in the regulation of menstrual cycles and illegally terminating unwanted pregnancies many of which are known to have been the result of rape by enslavers this book also featuring new poetry by bishop and an interview situates the market woman within the context of caribbean enslavement and the tea trade the tea service will be considered alongside other items in the museum's collection relating to colonialism and empire and provides a lens through which contemporary debates on the present day impacts of these issues can be explored this fascinating selection of photographs traces some of the many ways in which bishop's stortford has changed and developed over the last century new orleans artist george valentine dureau 1930 2014 has always been an enigma his status as an important artist gained momentum beginning with his first exhibition at the new orleans museum of art then the isaac delgado museum of art in the mid 1960s not only did his career undergo a meteoric rise but his work proved at once controversial and provocative nuanced and groundbreaking critics and collectors embraced his bold images describing them as sexual sensual exploitative erotic iconoclastic and innovative beneath the surface dureau was even more complex as a person and persona as he crafted a sensational character out of his artistic acumen his reputation dimmed after his death but in recent years his importance and that of the new orleans art scene he occupied has once again been recognized george valentine dureau life and art in new orleans reassembles the pieces of dureau's puzzle work life the complexity of his life came together in the studio where he created some of the most important artworks of the latter twentieth century this lush publication features 100 large format photographic plates most of which have never been seen or published and surprisingly some in color there are more than 200 illustrations and two essays to accompany the plates along with a special section devoted to the artists and artwork of 1980s new orleans featuring hundreds of additional photographs and several appendices of supplementary materials such as interview transcripts a timeline of dureau's life and career a map of important locations and a section on relevant art publications invitations and posters beginning with the promptings of the transgressively erotic title story jacqueline bishop came to see the hybrid format of this book with its mix of short stories essays and interviews could begin to encompass her desire to see where she had arrived at in a creative career that encompassed being published as a novelist poet critic and exhibited as an artist how did these sundry positions connect together what aspects of both conscious intention and unconscious interior motivations did they reveal the stories none more than a few pages long can be read at several levels the mentor who teaches the child gymnast a contortionist s erotic positions the adoptive mother who shoots down ex partner and adopted child when the former debauches the latter as the subject of pornographic photographs the relationship between tattooist and the woman who offers her naked body for decoration are all sharply and persuasively realized as short fictions but they also hint at a writer s interior dialogue and can be read as parables about the relationship between the free imagination and the controlling and even potentially betraying power of art the essays explore more conscious areas of expression they deal with the experiences of maternal separation family histories and mythologies the search for grounding in the life of a jamaican grandmother the relationship with a male writing mentor travel to morocco the inspiration of the writing lives of jamaicans claud mckay and roger mais and how 9 11 showed her how deeply she had become a new yorker the interviews which investigate sometimes her writing sometimes her art and occasionally both provide context for the stories and the essays they are at their most revealing when interviewers ask jacqueline bishop questions she hasn t asked herself
